North Sea places

Lindesnes is the southernmost tip of Norway and its old lighthouse is a great place for getting a scenic view of the North Sea.

The name Lindesnes stems from Old Norse where it is thought to have meant "The end".

Today, adventurers go on expeditions every year between Lindesnes and Nordkapp more than 1,700 km to the North, by bike, on foot, or on ski! Perhaps an idea for a future summer holiday?
